

Edward's reaction

- Edward was by no means happy at hearing of yet another rebellion.
- By June 1306, Bruce's small army had been destroyed by Sir Aymer de Valence's English army at Methven, near Perth.
- The defeat scattered Bruce's party. Bruce fled west only to be routed near Loch Tay and defeated again by Comyn's cousin, John MacDougall of Lorn, at Dail Righ.
- Edward confiscated all of Bruce's lands, executed one of his brothers and captured his wife and sister at Kildrummy Castle, placing them in a wooden cage.
